This Month's Cover

Among early Yule cards most prized by collectors are the lovely little mechanicals or pull-outs, which appeared about 1870, as shown here and on the cover. Printed in many separate pieces and assembled by hand, they are operated by strings or pull-tabs to unfold into quaint three-dimensionals with pop-up Christmas scenes.

In the 1890s, larger and somewhat less delicately fabricated but ornate and colorful greetings of this sort were imported from Germany. Two examples of this later type, shown on cover, are richly lithographed, with embossed gold lace work.

Except for sentiment, many early Christmas cards are identical in design with valentines of the period, often illustrated with pictures bearing no relation to the day celebrated. Cards pictured are from the collection of Samuel A. Cousley, New York.

CHRISTMAS LIGHTS, once used on Christmas trees to hold candles, 2" diameter, about 4" high, in Diamond Quilted pattern.

Various colors, $1.50 each. These are about 75 years old.

All goods are old and original. Cartage extra.

Marjorie M. Smith EDITOR-PUBLISHER

IT'S always so much fun, for all of us here at Spinning Wheel, putting the Christmas issue together. All of the wonderful merchandise offered in the advertising reaches us not too long before we go to press . . . makes us feel like the retail shopkeeper fixing his Christmas show window when we get these ads ready for your Christmas shopping.

And to whet your Christmas appetite for antiques for gifts, for home, for shop, or just for you alone, we work 'round the calendar on the stories that will form the backdrop for this huge display window. Last February, for example, we heard about the Danish Christmas Spoon collection (page 22) and thought what an excellent sequel it would make to the Christmas 1955 Danish Christmas Plate story. Louise Cirillo, long familiar to our columns with her spoon research, immediately got in touch with the spoons' owner, Mrs. Neils Hoegsberg. To have the spoons photographed properly necessitated several trying sessions with the photographers. Back and forth flew the correspondence, photographs galore passed through our hands. Finally, the excellent pictures you see in this issue arrived just short of deadline to complete this particular presentation that was begun last February.

Aristocracy of Dolldom, (page 26) is another that has been in work for a long time. One of our staff was so impressed with it that she suggested that someone, somewhere should start a Social Registry of important, early, authentic dolls. We all agreed . . . such registry would be an invaluable aid to doll collectors, museums, libraries and historical societies . . . a list with pictures and descriptions of as many as possible of the existing examples in their original costumes . . . a Who's Who of Dolldom. The idea gained momentum until the decision was that there'd be no better place to do just such enrollment than through Spinning Wheel. So, in order to start . . . or discover if our readers would really like to start . . . we hereby establish a Registry for Dolls. Interested persons may send professional quality, black and white photographs of the doll, the complete story and documentation as known, name of the owner, and permission to publish at our convenience as the doll family grows.

Gladys A. Meyrick who wrote Legends Portrayed on Christmas Postcards (page 18) is glad cards are finally getting more attention on the collecting scene. She writes that there were 48 post card frames entered in the Post Card Class at the Minnesota State Fair this year . . . an indication, that in the Mid-West at least, the hobby is growing by leaps and bounds. Several years ago, Mrs. Meyrick contends, one had to "whisper" his interest was post cards. Now it is recognized as a sensible, intelligent adult pursuit.

An antiques enthusiast I know . . . a dyed-in-the-wool collector of anything old, employs a most charming method of gifting her non-collector friends. She first chooses a subject dear to their hearts, selects something old that will appeal without fail to this specific interest, and encloses in the package a page from Spinning Wheel containing an illustrated story of the object. Nine times out of 10 a new collector is born . . . like one fortunate recipient of a Battersea patch box in 1952 who now has more than 25 prize examples. Anyone with a little ingenuity and forethought can do the same, expensively, or as inexpensively as he wishes . . . and surround his gift with an aura of individuality that will make it second to none. If you like this idea, and we thought you might, turn to this month's stories on Figural Bottles (page 14), Still Banks (page 30), and by all means the Toy Round-up (page 32) . . . where a good many thoughts will come your way for most anyone on your Christmas list.

Happy Shopping and Merry Christmas to you, one and all.

Hook Creamer

Enclosed are four color transparencies, showing the little cup that is meant to hang on the hook; also shown is the pitcher and stand, with all three pieces separate as well as assembled. I own all three pieces. I do not know just what the original use of the piece is; the cup appears to be a measuring cup—although it is hard to say what would be measured from such a small pitcher. Some folks think it is a "drip cup" — but this seems unlikely also.

MRS. ARTHUR E. MINOR
Ottumwa, Iowa

We have selected the above picture from Mrs. Minor's group to show the complete set, which answers next to the last question on the "Hook Creamer". When the specific purpose of the hanging cup is determined, research can be considered completed. Our guess is that the set was made for cream or syrup; contents being poured from swinging pitcher to smaller one in exact portion for diner's use.

Beautiful Northwest

Imagine my pleasure and interest to read such a fine report of my home state — Washington — in the October issue. . . I am sorry you did not have time to spend in our Seattle shops (antiques) for we have many nice ones and even in the smaller ones can often be found real treasures. You would be surprised how many famous people from Hollywood, etc., who have been well known for their collections who send all or portions up to our Auction Houses for disposal . . . The next time you come west, come prepared to see the Seattle shops; they more or less line the highway between here and Tacoma.

MRS. JOHN J. O'BRIEN
Seattle, Washington

My husband and I were both thrilled to read the write-up about our lovely West Coast. One could just tell you enjoyed every minute of your visit here, and if people in the East do not catch a little of your enthusiasm it won't be your fault. Even I who live here and can see both sides of the mountain from time to time felt a little prouder of our good state of Washington because of your article.

FLORENCE E. EIKELBERNER
Wenatchee, Washington

I read with much interest about your trip to the West. We lived one year in Tacoma and we loved it there . . . Recently my husband took several pictures of a set of post cards, "Ezra Meeker Historical Post Cards". They tell the story of this famous expedition and are extremely interesting and educational, valuable too, to a schoolroom for creating interest. There are 16 post cards in each of two sets. Every known subject, I believe, can be found on cards, and that is one reason I feel that this hobby has such wonderful possibilities.

GLADYS A. MEYRICK
St. Paul, Minnesota

Thank you so much for the kind words you wrote about our great North West, even though you did mention "rain". (We call it "Seattle Mist"). Did you know we have less precipitation here annually than Baltimore? Look it up . . . I was pleased to note what you said about prices. This confirms a statement I have made time and again.

Arkansas Collections

I have seen the Lonsdale collection of Coin Glass many times (Spinning Wheel Sept. '56). It is in a house on the main street and unattended. You drive up, open the front door and turn on the lights. Stay as long as you like —and turn off the lights as you leave. It is surely a worthwhile collection to see. Lonsdale is on the old Benton Road about midway between Hot Springs and Benton. We also saw a very fine collection of pressed glass at the Albert Pike Museum in Winslow, which contained many pieces of Coin Glass, also. There is a very fine collection of Threaded Glass in the home of Mrs. C. Floyd Huffsa in Hot Springs. Verily, Arkansas may not have so many collectors, but those I have seen are right at the top.

No Give-aways

The other night I got my old copies of Spinning Wheel out to give to a friend who has a shop. Mr. Marinoff was not an antiquer originally, but saw the magazines going out. "Don't take those away. I will read them over. They're just as good now as when you got them." I rather felt that way, too, and back into the shelves they went, six years of them!

Funeral Invitations

In your Homespun column in the October issue, you mention funeral invitations in the newspaper. You do not mention the funeral cards or invitations that were sent out to friends and relatives. These are not so well or widely known.

I have a collection of over 1500 such cards or invitations, dating from the middle thirties to the turn of the century. Two large scrapbooks, containing some 1200, were collected by a gentleman who died in 1902. In 60 years, not a year but what was represented by at least a few invitations. They are all of this locality.

The first were small, on very thin paper, and the message occupied a small space in the center of the card, surrounded by pictures of weeping willows, monuments, and urns. A little later came very fancy borders instead of cemetery scenes. A few were in color, usually a pale blue or lavender, but most of them were printed in black on white. By 1860, the message occupied more space and was bordered by a couple of thin black lines. By the end of the century the cards were much larger and had a wide black border.

The cards were delivered to the homes of friends and relatives by messenger. I have cards dated 1834, twenty-eight years after our town was founded. One of the interesting things about these cards is that for about twenty years, from 1850 to 1870, the cause of death was included in the mesage and some of the diseases are strange to us. They included, for instance, "putrid sore throat", "affection of the brain", "catarrhal fever". More common causes were consumption, dyspepsia, croup, congestion of the bowels, and bronchial affection . . . Apparently families in all walks of life made use of these cards.

EDMOND K. DYE
Eaton, Ohio

I have a funeral invitation that was sent to friends upon the death of my great grandfather. The "friends of the family are respectfully invited to attend" is in script on black bordered double-fold stationary about six by four inches in size. My grandmother told me that when her father died in Indianapolis, Indiana, these invitations were delivered by hand by the servants of the family to all family friends they wished to have at the funeral services.

MRS. JAMES H. CABLE
Sierra Madre, Calif.

In our locality, funeral invitations were used many years before 1846, the year you mention in the October Spinning Wheel. These notices were passed around town like hand bills, sometimes with black borders, while some were on ruled note paper. This custom was in use until telephones were commonly installed. . . . The Swiss and French settled our community and we are named for Vevay, Switzerland. The plat of our town was laid out in 1813 although there were many families here before that time. . . . We have a wonderful Switzerland County Historical Museum, located in a brick building erected in 1824 in the center of our town of Vevay, the exhibits all being from our own county. . . . We have over a hundred of these funeral notices in our files and many more valuable documents. I have an antiques shop and am interested in all these things.

Pretty Post Cards

I want to tell you how much I enjoyed the article "Campaign Post Cards" by Gladys A. Meyrick (Oct. '56). So many of my customers ask me "Where can I find out more about cards?" Though the supply and subjects are endless and the number of card collectors is growing very fast, very little has been written about them. I hope we will have many more such articles.

Last Chance

The last printing of my book, "Clarke's Fairy-lamps" is almost exhausted and I do not intend to run another edition at this time. I therefore wish to discontinue my ad in your magazine with the next issue. Ours has been a pleasurable association and I feel that thru your publication I reached many people who were interested in my book. Thank you for your good service.

If you could impress your advertisers that "sweet, cunning, and lovely" mean nothing in a glass or china advertisement, it would save money, and tempers. A word of real description would serve so much more purpose.

MEMO FROM: Marcia

STOCKING STUFFERS AND FOOT SAVERS: Besides the listings of antiques that make such wonderfully thoughtful and elegant Christmas gifts, Spinning Wheel advertising carries a good many service items that make useful and extremely appreciated "little" gifts — the tuck-in extras that say "Merry Christmas" for a long long time to our favorite homemakers and home craftsmen. These are the hard-to-find furniture polishes and waxes, right for antique furniture and for modern variety as well, lamp parts, metal cleaners, cup and saucer easels, plate hangers, lamp shade frames, furniture brasses, cements, paint removers and such. Some of these items, like Cementique, Lynch's Furniture Wax, Finish Feeder furniture polish, and Wirecraft products (aren't those plate hangers with the candleholder attractive?) are available at many antiques shops. Others are for sale by mail only . . . The PolyGlo metal polish, put out by Kensol, is something new on the market and does a terrific job on brass, copper, pewter and silver. In a pressurized can, it couldn't be handier. (Nice for all those copper bottomed pans that hang up in kitchens these days). Fleet Metal Cleaner, in a plastic bottle, gives the same all purpose service . . . Lamp parts offer all kinds of suggestions, whether you finish the project yourself or pass on the wherewithal to some special do-it-yourselfer. It might take days of department store tramping to find those attractive lamp shade frames from Osmun, and where would you look for a lamp converter—outside of Spinning Wheel? . . . All these items are in the stocking stuffer price range—all of them are superior products—and every one can be purchased simply and easily from your desk—by mail. Try out the various items yourself, and make your selection from those which prove most helpful to you. The day is long gone when a practical gift was unromantic. Today's time-saving remembrance is more than appreciated "for the thought"—it's used and used and used!

THE LAST (?) OF THE HOOK CREAMER: We have had ever so many interesting replies and conjectures to the inquiring article on the Hook Creamer (Aug. '56), and now the quest for the right answer is almost over. Readers have located the cup which hung on the hook (see LETTERS this issue), though there's been no authentic word as to its intended purpose. Maybe antiquers fifty years hence will be just as puzzled by some of today's up-to-the-minute gadgets! Mrs. George J. Campbell of Baltimore, Maryland, intrigued by the Hook Creamer puzzle, has shown us another elegancy of grandmother's day—a crocheted cover for a cream pitcher, elaborately fashioned to fit the top and lip of a small creamer. She has also a little embroidered linen square, with an openwork butterfly with raised wings in the corner. This was used to cover a slice or two of hot toast on tray or breakfast table, the raised wings to be used as a sort of handle in lifting the cloth. Antiquers of 2007, please file for reference!

SANTA'S SLEIGH: From Mrs. Herbert Greentree of Ashtabula, Ohio, comes this attractive picture of her Christmas sleigh. We wish we might show it to you in color, for the gaily wrapped packages in the white painted, holly-and-tinsel-tied baby's sleigh is so gaily effective against her sage green and white walls. Though Mrs. Greentree has used her sleigh with gifts as an indoor decoration—and how handy such a sleigh would be to hold the "early" gifts, outgoing or incoming, before the tree is up (unless, of course, you have to wait for Santa!)—it might be used with equal effectiveness on porch or lawn. Dummy packages for the out-of-doors might be wrapped in gay plastic, or oilcloth to withstand the weather.

NATIONAL EARLY AMERICAN GLASS CLUB: With the second Wednesday in October began another inspiring season for the Boston group of the National Early American Glass Club and its 23 regional groups throughout the country. The Boston group meets at 14 Beacon Street, and those in the locality interested should get in touch with Mrs. Mollie Dooley, 37 Beacon St., Boston, about membership immediately. Annual dues are only $2, which includes receipt of the quarterly Glass Club Bulletin so ably edited by Mrs. Ethel Mary Doane . . . One of the objectives of the organization has been to encourage the acquisition and presentation of rare glass pieces to local museums as permanently placed exhibits. In the June Bulletin are shown some excellent pictures of a collection of over 600 pieces of glass, purchased by members and friends of the Seattle (Wash.) Unit #1, now on permanent loan by them to the new Seattle Historical Museum. In addition, the group presented to the Seattle Art Museum, 300 authenticated cup plates as a memorial to one of their charter members, Mrs. Nathan Eckstein . . . Another group, the Dallas Unit, gives each year to the Dallas Museum one or more outstanding glass pieces. Pieces

What Finer Gift Than A Book!

For the collector or dealer friend who deserves that extra special gift, choose from this group of superlative titles, elegantly printed and bound—the finest in collecting volumes.

Old English Lustre Pottery by John & Baker. Most important volume ever published on the subject. Contains valuable subject material and also information regarding present day tales and suspicions, etc. Exquisitely produced, with 545 illustrations, 44 in lovely color $22.75

Good Sir Toby by Eyles. The story of toby jugs and character jugs through the ages. Includes information on Toby Fillpot & others, famous toby makers, values of old tobys, how a character jug is made, etc. $4.50

American Glass by McKearin. Again available and in a new edition containing over 3,000 illustrations including photographs and line drawings, etc. A very comprehensive work on glass and glass makers in America. An authority in its field $10.00

Staffordshire Chimney Ornaments by Haggar. Covers not only the well-known manufacturers of the 18th century such as Astbury, Whieldon and Ralph Wood but also the ramifications of these families and such little known workers as Obadiah and Martha Sherratt, George Hood and others. Also contains detailed appendices which offer a ready reference to toy manufacturers of the period, trade modellers, details of figure bases, potters' marks and other essential information $8.50

Chelsea, Bow And Derby Porcelain Figures by Stoner. Contains new, fundamental and understandable knowledge on the distinguishing and differential characteristics of the soft paste porcelain figures made at the factories. This book will enable dealer and collector to make their own identifications with reasonable certainty and so derive added satisfaction from this fascinating ceramic study. Beautifully printed $21.00

Pennsylvania Clocks And Clockmakers by George H. Eckhardt. Devoted solely to Pennsylvania clocks, this book is a mine of new information on old timepieces. It gives a detailed account of the tall case clocks of Pennsylvania and their makers, the part clocks played in the development of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, of succeeding styles in furniture, decoration and folk art that strongly influenced their design. Also tells about clock music, the theory of clocks and their operation, identification, appraisal, repair and restoration, Pennsylvania watches and watchpapers as well. Contains line drawings and many photos of rare clocks $15.00

The Gun Collector's Handbook Of Values by Chapel. Describes in detail and gives value for good and fine condition of nearly 3,000 antique and semi-modern firearms $9.00

Britten's Old Clocks And Watches And Their Makers. For more than half a century this has been the standard work on horological history. Out of print for 20 years, it is now published in this new seventh edition, virtually re-written and completely re-illustrated. (4,000 new names are added to the list of early makers.) It is incomparably the finest work on its subject, a reliable tool of the trade for dealers, an essential guide for those starting to collect, and the most authoritative general reference work available. Illustrated $25.00

The Antiques Book by Winchester. A beautiful book of general interest to all collectors. In it will be found something for every taste and collecting interest. There are 96 pages of illustrations comprising over 200 photographic reproductions. $6.00

The Powder Flask Book by Ray Riling. The complete story of the powder flask and its use with firearms in sport and war. It describes in text and shows in clear pictures nearly 1600 powder flasks plus rare arms—both hand and shoulder weapons—cased and uncased. This beautiful book is really four in one—A History of the Flask, A Textbook, A Picture Book of Rare Arms, and A Flask Collector's Book of Values. It's 17 new chapters unfold an almost forgotten art of manufacture and mode in the use of arms $30.00

Nantgarw Porcelain by John. The complete story of this fabulous porcelain told in detail, plus information on how to identify fakes in this field. Illustrated $21.00

Chinese Pottery And Stoneware by Thiel. Points out in great detail the curious characteristics, such as iridescense, feel and look found in genuine Oriental art and how to detect fakes. Illustrated with lovely plates $15.00

Figural Bottles

from the collection of Mrs. A. L. Schmidt photographed by Lauren Leavitt

ALTHOUGH Mrs. A. L. Schmidt of Long Beach, California, in her search for information about the figure bottles she collects, has frequently come across such statements as "Collectors have a list of over 600 known shapes", "Over 600 bitters bottles have been listed", or "The French have produced more than 700 different types of figure bottles", she has never been able, for all her diligence, to locate these elusive lists.

Whether they actually exist, or only could exist, should someone take the time and effort to compile them, is a moot question. However, Mrs. Schmidt, in her own research over a period of years, has started her own compilation and to date lists 284 different figural bottles, with her list still growing. Not all bottles included in the list are in Mrs. Schmidt's personal collection, but all have been seen and studied first-hand. Among them are candy containers and perfume bottles, and liquor bottles in figural shapes, bottles in ceramics, as well as those in glass.

in a wide window. Preferring colored glass, she fills those which are clear with tinted water. She has yet to find anyone, she assures us, collector or non-collector, old or young, who is disinterested in her display. In fact, her bottles have beguiled many new collectors to the field. Her greatest fan, perhaps, and to all indications an "antiquer of the future" is her two-year old grandson!

The souvenir phase of many of these figural bottles adds a note of sentiment as well as historical regard to such collections, and the intriguing hint of "old days, old ways" is to be found in such bottles as the tiny sweet syrup goblet container hawked by railroad candy butchers, and the greeting-shaped Christmas give-aways from the "corner saloon".

For those with limited funds for collecting, figural bottles offer a wide variety of selection. Even good examples need not be costly, though as any collector advances, the more the rare and unusual pieces tempt the purse. Such bottles, still available in sufficient quantity and variety to make the search rewarding without being exhausting, are bound to increase in value as time goes on.

Many, with no thought of serious collecting, find that a few bottles of intriguing shape or history make attractive conversation pieces in their own homes—and at this time of year, offer an amusing suggestion for attractive inexpensive Christmas remembrances.

Above: Christmas and New Year greetings were given to holiday customers in many fancy shapes, such as this realistic ceramic pretzel; ceramic Glad Hand, simulated gold ring, neck opening at bottom of wrist, possibly both left and right hands were made; ceramic horse shoe, black finish, neck at back. Legends Portrayed On Christmas Post Cards

By Gladys A. Meyrick

CHRISTMAS is first and always the celebration of the birth of Jesus of Nazareth, but observance of the event is deeply rooted in the folklore of ancient days. Long before the birth of Christ, the early nations celebrated the passing of the winter solstice and the beginning of the sun's return journey. Great festivals with feasting and gift-giving were held. It is only natural then that legend and custom surrounding these celebrations would find their way, in pictorial expression, to the modern greeting card.

The practice of sending Christmas greeting cards dates back a few more than 100 years, but it was around the turn of the century that Christmas post card greetings enjoyed their greatest popularity. And it is these post cards that afford a variety of collecting categories, not the least of which are the traditional customs, beliefs, and legends of different countries which they so colorfully depict.

In King Solomon's time, greens were used in all sacred rites of the religious ceremonies. The mistletoe was a revered plant of the Druids which was never permitted to touch the soil. It grew on the oak tree and according to a Scandinavian myth, mistletoe means "Give me a Kiss". Another popular belief was that if enemies met underneath the mistletoe in a forest, they would lay down their arms and declare peace until the next day. Many of Ellen H. Clapsaddle's creations on post cards used mistletoe in the design.

Legends about the fir abound, but one less known is that this tree once bore fruit which Eve plucked, causing the foliage to shrivel into tiny, spiny needles. The night that Christ was born, the fir bloomed. On one especially lovely post card there is depicted a beautiful embossed tree, laden with gifts and ornaments, with these words:

"Oh! Christmas Tree
How we love thee
Thy fruit doth bear
Happiness not Care".

The use of decorations on the holiday tree could date back to early Roman days when it was customary to hang little masks of a heathen god on pine trees to protect them from the wind. And it might be this very legend that inspired the artist for a particular post card which features grotesque faces painted on walnut shells as ornaments for the Christmas tree.

Another fascinating myth is that of a tiny gray spider that spun a web in the stable the night the Christ Child was born. It was supposed to have been for the purpose of keeping the Child warm and comfortable. Apparently holiday greeting cards illustrating this legend were short lived in favor of the more colorful, for I have only found one that pictures a spider's web in the design. It is also told that on the night Jesus was born, animals and birds were given the power to talk. The American Indians have a superstition that the deer kneel and look up to the Great Spirit on Christmas Eve. On one German import these thoughts are depicted with a rooster, a cat, a dog, and a donkey standing at a window proclaiming "Prosit Neujahr".

From early days in many nations, gift-giving was expected, but the bearer of gifts differed from country to country; in Poland they were believed to come from the Stars, in Hungary from the Angels, in Denmark from Jule-Nissen (the small elf), and in Czechoslovakia from St. Nicholas who was always accompanied by an Angel. Before the Christian era, the Germans believed that Hertha, the goddess of the Home, appeared in the flames of the hearth which might have been the origin of today's legend that Santa Claus comes down the chimney.

The Scandinavian countries have two popular customs which are fre-

Danish Christmas Spoons

From The Collection Of Mrs. Neils Hoegsberg Of Oakland, California

By Louise Cirillo

DANISH Christmas spoons are the result of a competition begun in 1910 among the designers, sculptors, and artists of Denmark. Each year the Museum of Art in Copenhagen selects the design which most artfully expresses the Christmas theme and it is executed in silver dessert sets (matching forks and spoons).

While not early, in point of time, these sets or parts of sets are truly collectors' items, valuable at their issuance and increasing steadily through the years. Fortunate indeed is the collector who has assembled even a few of these masterpieces designed by the most talented of Danish artists, for they represent a "picture book in silver" reflecting each individual artist's concept of the Christmas season down through the years.

A bit larger than the conventional teaspoon with wide, generous bowls and handles, these spoons are graceful and almost fragile in appearance despite the thickness and weight of the silver. Each is inscribed on the front, or reverse of the handle with JUL or JULEN (referring to the Yuletide Season) which is followed by the year of issuance. In the following descriptions of the spoons illustrated, the designer of each, when known, is included.

JUL 1934. Madonna and Child by O. Staehr-Nielsen. In relief against a background of lead-blue enamelling, with the nimbi, their faces, and the ram's horn in bright gold; bowl and center stem decoration in gold, balance in natural silver.

JULEN 1942. Madonna and Child by Ib Lunding. Silver handle has appearance of being inset into gold shank of bowl; the nimbus and center star points are bright gold; faces in white enamel.

JULEN 1938. Snowberries designed by Ebbe Sadolin. Berries of white enamel against the silver veined leaves; star, its rays, handle outline and bowl of bright gold; stem is natural silver.

JULEN 1937. Bluebirds in the Christmas (grain) Wheat by Palle Suenson. All-over gold with tiny birds in blue; head of grain with extending beards in pierced-work forms the handle. Symbolic of Denmark's holiday custom of placing a sheaf of grain (saved from the fall harvest) on gables, gateways and barndoors as Christmas dinner for the birds.

JUL 1950. Christmas Trees by Paul Hoyrup. Gold bowl, silver shank and handle; trees in green, each topped by a white star.

JULEN 1941. Mistletoe by Ole Hagen. Extremely heavy with magnificent pierced-work handle; all-over bright and heavy gold with mistletoe berries in white enamelling.

JUL 1954. Kraemmerhuse (cornucopia candy containers used for Danish Christmas tree decorations) by unidentified designer. Brightly colored design in red and two shades of blue, crowned at the end by white star on gold spoon.

JULEN 1923. Name of design and designer unidentified. In natural silver except for the crowning star and its rays at tip in gold; pierced-work handle gives prominence to "Church of Our Lady" in Copenhagen; rays also shown on reverse, widening and extending almost to bowl they cover most of the church and floral decoration to the pedestal base, the blossom ends taking the shape of an "opening bud" rather than full-blown blossom on front design. LETITIA PENN DOLL

MEHETABLE HODGES OF SALEM

While this story was in preparation, this doll was sold to a California collector and she is ultimately destined for a museum collection.

The Aristocracy Of Dolldom

Exemplified In Six Examples From The Imogene Anderson Collection, One Of The Most Comprehensive In The United States

By Ellouise D. Wilbert

WHEN we consider dolls only as playthings we do dolls, and people, an injustice. Dolls have been collectors' items for so many years that one may say, without fear of contradiction, there were doll collectors before there were collectors of American antique furniture of any kind!

It is probably no news to anyone interested in dolls that many dolls in the early days were not made as playthings for little girls, but as mannequins for the display of millinery and frocks and gowns, and as conceits and elegancies for adult ladies of the courts and of high society, which is not to disparage dolls made for young ladies of all ages.

Of all the doll collections in the United States, one of the finest in terms of truly historic and documented examples is the Imogene Anderson collection. In fact, Mrs. Anderson's dolls are so well catalogued and documented that her catalog, should it ever be published together with portraits of her delightful collection, would be a welcome addition to many libraries, and especially that of the doll collector and costumer.

Anstiss Derby Of Salem

To attempt even the sketchiest of resumes of the Anderson collection would take more than my allotted space, so I shall confine my comments to the factual and documented story of each of the six dolls shown.

The Letitia Penn Doll. William Penn, proprietor of Pennsylvania, brought this doll to his colony in 1699 as a gift for his daughter Letitia to present to little Miss Rankin, daughter of a Friend. This is presumed to be the oldest doll in America or, more properly, the doll oldest in point of time in America. It is of carved wood, with gesso and enamel. Three part glass eyes, wig of flax, dress of brocade and velvet. Precise period (William & Mary) style costume. One arm missing. 20 inches tall.

The Bonaparte-Patterson Doll. Jerome Bonaparte, young brother of Napoleon, married Elizabeth Patterson, a Baltimore belle. This doll (and one other) were sent to Bonaparte for his grand-daughter, by Mlle. Huret,

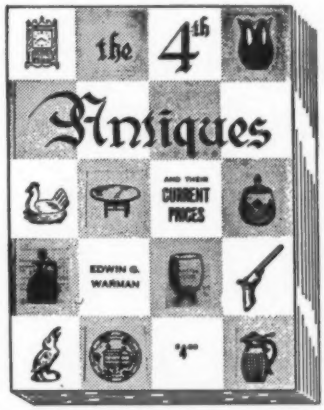
The Price Is The Thing!

The first thing the customer asks: "What is the price?" The dealer, when buying, inquires: "How much?" If you own a copy of THE FOURTH ANTIQUES AND THEIR CURRENT PRICES, you can determine the average comparative price in a very few moments. Many users of the book have made or saved the cost of the volume on their first purchases or sales. If you buy, sell, or swap antiques, you cannot afford to be without the latest and greatest book on antique prices!



The book has almost 20,000 entries. Numerous new illustrations show hundreds of items for reference and comparison.

New listings, additional entries and new features have been incorporated to make it the Greatest, Latest and Most Convenient Price Book ever published in the antiques field.

THE VOLUME COVERS THE IMPORTANT PATTERNS IN CLEAR AND COLORED GLASS AS WELL AS OTHER GROUPS SUCH AS ART GLASS, CHINAWARE, FURNITURE, METALWARES, WOODENWARE, ETC.

The handbook lists current comparative values and illustrations of 290 different patterns (8,000 items) in both clear and colored glass.

In addition to pattern glass, more than 160 other groups of antiques and collector's items are evaluated. Most of these are illustrated by single or group photos, plus data concerning their history and/or process of manufacture.

Many types of Art Glass, chinaware, dolls, furniture, lamps, banks, metal items, toys, steins, woodenware and practically all other items found in antique shops or the average private collection are listed and evaluated.

Price trends have changed—if you buy or sell antiques and collectors' items, you need this up-to-date Price Guide.

famed Parisian doll maker in 1855 and are marked by the maker. 18 inches tall, hair wig, hollow body of black composition, painted flesh colour. White kid covering to head. Dressed in black silk velvet, and with handmade underclothing, complete.

*Mehetable Hodges of Salem. French. Captain Gamaliel Hodges of Salem brought this doll to America for his daughter Anstiss. It was purchased in France 1715, carried on a nine year voyage and arrived 1724. Oldest French doll (of record) that has been here for so long a time. Within our schedule of dating by periods, this would fall in that of Queen Anne. Remained for seven generations in Hodges family. 21 inches tall, hand made wood head and body, features painted, three part glass eyes. Real hair wig is dark brown. Arms of white kid. No legs. Fully dressed in pink silk court dress, with handmade underclothes. Real lace with bows and pewter pins.

Lillie Turner. Lillie comes from Paris but lived for many years with Newport people! Purchased c. 1790 in Philadelphia by Hon. Benjamin Bourne of Bristol, R. I., a member of the Congress. Given to his niece, Lillie Turner. 11 inches tall, brown glass "open and shut" eyes, operating by wire pull. Cloth body, handmade shoes, wax head, bust and arms. Marie Antoinette costume. Grey hair (the height of fashion on State occasions), thread lace cap, silk poke bonnet, sheer linen dress.

Peddler Doll. Purchased at Christie's, London, 1932. Date is early 18th century. 9¼ inches tall, wood, jointed, wax head, glass eyes. Red cape, blue silk poke bonnet, with undercap of white. Basket displays "Court Plaister," needles and finery. Such dolls are among the most desirable—and scarcest—of dolldom.

Bonaparte-Patterson Doll

Anstiss Derby of Salem. Date is 1826. 14½ inches tall. Composition head wax covered, brown glass eyes, kid body and arms, wooden legs. Real hair in elaborate dress entwining pink roses. Costume of blue silk. Once given to Martha Prickman of Salem, grand-daughter of the famous Elias Haskett Derby. This is a "fashion doll" and was purchased not for a child but for a young lady who had the dress on the doll copied as her first ball gown. Fashion dolls have a record of ever increasing use from the 13th century. They were finally superceded by fashion plates. Note the perfect miniature Queen Anne Spanish footed side chair with this doll.

Collectible Still Banks

By William H. Montgomery

(Photos by Doris Montgomery)

PENNY banks of pottery, glass and tin appeared early on the American scene. Poor Richard's adage "A penny saved is a penny earned" was taken quite literally, and as soon as the first copper pennies were minted in 1793, enterprising glassmakers and potters had banks ready to hold them.

Sometime after 1860, cast iron banks appeared. Though a few still banks in iron antedate the mechanical banks, it was not until the late 19th and early 20th centuries that the still bank achieved mass popularity.

That many of these still banks are scarcely fifty years old seems not to detract from their interest to today's collectors, but rather to add by this very "lateness" a certain nostalgic charm. Makers of still banks, as of the mechanicals, turned to the fads and fancies of the day for inspiration, and it was not so long ago that Black Beauty was on every bookshelf, the Flatiron Building was the place to see in New York, Mutt and Jeff were in the Sunday funnies, and performing animals made Circus Day memorable. Iron still banks, cast in such pleasant molds appeal both to those who "remember when" and to those whose "Grandma had one!"

Earlier still banks were usually of two pieces of metal, bolted or screwed together, to be opened by removing bolts or screws. Around 1895, safe and building banks appeared, which were opened by working a combination on the door. This type was popular as late as the 1920s.

Many attractive forms are being currently issued by banks and thrift institutions which reflect today's interests. One such features an airplane, others Daniel Boone, David Crockett, Captain Kidd and such.

The modest collector, with a fascination for the America of the past seventy-five years and an eye to a collection that is due to increase in value, may well find it profitable to follow the familiar slogan "America Banks on Banks".

From the funnies, Mutt and Jeff, Mama Katzenjammer and her incorrigible boys were popular subjects. Best known of the many famous building banks is New York's Flatiron Building. Rough Rider Teddy Roosevelt, about to charge San Juan Hill, is earlier and more difficult to find than a Trick pony bank, for instance, but still attainable. Black Beauty, is now one of the rare still banks. So is the Liberty Bell, patented 1875, and sold at the Philadelphia Centennial. Printed history, pasted on wood base, describes it as "Bailey's Centennial Money Bank."

A Round-Up Of Toys For Today's Collector

CERTAIN of the categories of toys made over the past century have arrived at price levels which, speaking conservatively, put them beyond the purse of many of us. The price records set by some of the rarer cast iron mechanical banks, for example, sound more like the auction records for "Old Masters" than for toys made within the memory of many people living today. And, no one in the world of collecting decries the status of cast iron mechanical banks as collectors' items. That they might have done so, several decades ago, goes without question. At that time, anyone astute enough to have bought them while they were cheap could have reaped his deserved reward on today's market.

Happily, there are still opportunities today for those of us with foresight, and while none of us would be so brash as to predict that any of them offer the same value enhancement as the banks, the following would seem to be worthy of deep consideration. To pioneer in collecting any of these, and others, mentioned but not illustrated, will be to establish some sort of trend, or if the trend has already started, to add to its momentum. The illustrations are from wholesalers catalogs of the first decade of the 20th century . . . and prior to World War I. These same catalogs also contain illustrations of mechanical toy banks, so how can one view these "later" items as being of little consequence?

Drums . . . magic lantern slides . . . early motion picture projectors . . . early locomotion toys . . . early toy stoves . . . a limitless variety of things to collect. And we do predict that in the next quarter century, only twenty-five years hence, there will be many specialized collections of these toys, which, in some cases, will be considered so important that books will be written about them.

COMIC MECHANICAL TOYS

We may be "Johnny Come-Lately" in suggesting this category, but it is, you should note, a category within a category. We mean, these are comical mechanical toys. The clowns playing fiddles, the walking salesman, the dancing grotesques, the Alabama Coon Jigger, the motorcycle with trailer holding woman, and the walking and climbing chimps are all really funny toys. These date from 1894 to 1914. Some are of German make, the last to get across the ocean before the war of 1914 . . . and having no twins, here until after 1919. This, then, may be a category worthy of more attention.

"CHILDREN'S SIZE" CUPS & SAUCERS

Of course many demi-tasse items could be included but it is a fact that children's size cups and saucers were made and sold as such . . . and not as demi-tasses. Notice one is lettered "Merry Christmas", another "Baby" and another "Sister". The one at top, left, is in the form of a rose. Others of record are imitative of other flowers and of vegetables. A Round-Up of Toys [Continued from preceding page]

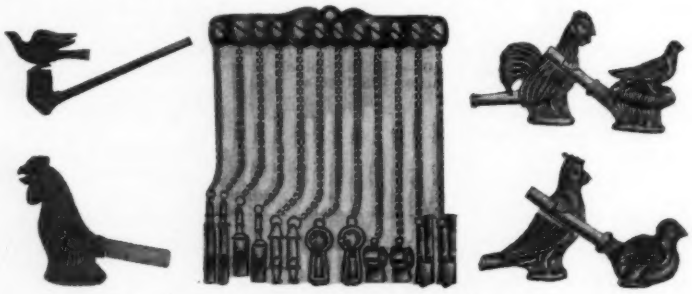
CHRISTMAS TREE DECORATIONS

Not long ago, at one of the shows, we saw a dishpan full of early glass tree ornaments in the form of vegetables and fruits. They were priced at $2.50 each. All of them were prototypes of the ones here shown. Glass "balls" such as these, thanks to Butler Brothers, Mr. Woolworth and others became staples which went into every home. Unfortunately, these were fragile . . . or shall we say fortunately? They have not survived in quantity but now they are display case items waiting for specializing collectors to select a sub-category. You can collect vegetable and fruit pieces, you can collect sculptured pieces, human faces and figures; you can collect replicas of common things, be they balloons, bells, horns, or what. In a word, you can collect.



WHISTLES AND WARBLERS

What's music? "Tis a cadence of pleasant noises!" Making music . . . or pleasant noise, has ever been a boy's delight. With whistles they have been doing it. And bosuns still pipe (or whistle) the Admiral aboard ship. To specialize in whistles and their cousins, the warblers, is to explore another possible field of opportunity not only for personal pleasure but possibly, also, for personal fame. We must remember that whistles giving different notes were finally hitched together and lo, the pipe organ was born. Perhaps Mr. Hammond might start a whistle collection that would make all pipe organ builders wish they had started it. A whistle collection could be no end of fun.

MUSICAL TOPS

Ever since the humming sound of a simple spinning top intrigued philosophers, tops designed to hum tunefully have been made. That the change of pitch, note, or sound is due to the change from high to medium, to low velocity of turn is well known. But these toy tops, mostly made of painted or printed tin, really were something in the days when the whole family gathered 'round the Christmas tree. We feel quite sure that a purposeful collector, starting with examples of the sort shown, will soon be discovering prototypes and others dating 'way back to the 1700s. Do you know of anyone specializing on humming toy tops? Who knows? You who start today may be the first!

For Christmas!

The American Story In Spoons

Spoon collectors who have long awaited a comprehensive research on American Souvenir Spoons will be thrilled with this beautiful, informative and diverting book, based on the premise that every American souvenir spoon is a "talking" spoon. To know the story behind each spoon, of the people and events that inspired its making, lends new depth to this fascinating field of collecting–and intimately associates the souvenir spoon with the history of America.

Over 200 spoons illustrated.

Over 500 "spoonographies" — and exact descriptions, to help you identify your spoons & their makers. Something New in American History.

A "Must" for all Spoon Collectors.

How Others Use Their Antiques . .

Above, French chintz curtains in green and red Provincial pattern set off the white plaster walls; bright woolen rag rugs were woven on an old loom still in operation near Allentown, Pa. Small picture on wall is a religious primitive on tin from an old church in Mexico, and the stone owl on the hearth is an old mold for fashioning fire irons.

Close-up of Majolica fish used in arrangement above vary in size from 6 to 13". Larger sizes are known, and a 5" model is reputed. In shades of gray with pink or yellow throats, some with light, others with dark bases. Unmarked, they were popular around the 1880s.

Fireplaces
Old and New

GAY or prim, elegant or informal, conventional or amusing — the treatment of the fireplace mantel sets the mood for the room around it. Happily for those restless "movers of furniture", the mood can be changed at will, for such is the variety of possible mantel arrangements that there is never need for monotony. And nothing, as any homemaker will agree, perks up a room more quickly or disperses winter doldrums more easily than "something different on the mantel."

The two fireplaces pictured are completely different in feeling. Miss Woods' was built in 1765, Mrs. Faure's in 1955. Yet each, treated as a display shelf for special treasures, is an expression of personality of both house and owner.

Miss Woods', old stone house in Quakertown, N. J. is shaded by three majestic maples, planted the week Lincoln died, in his memory. The kitchen section, in which the fireplace shown is located, was built about 1765, the front part of the house, which is much more formal, with fine paneling and carved mantels, being added about 1780. The house had had but three or four owners before Miss Woods acquired it, and fortunately none had been inclined to "renovate." All the old stone walls, ranging from

18 to 24 inches thick, the pine panels, beams, mantels, and most of the hardware throughout the house is original. Her chief task in restoration was the scraping of layers of paint!

The narrow mantel lends itself to an informal arrangement of pieces well suited to the architecture and feeling of the room. Besides the clock at the left, there can be seen a Pennsylvania tole covered sugar bowl and tea caddy, a pair of Bennington poodles, pewter candlesticks, trencher plate, beaker, and church candleholder, a squeak toy bird in cage, Amish animals from a Christmas creche, and a Pennsylvania plaster angel. All are old. The charming picture above the mantel of white deer and brownish trees and foliage against a beautiful old blue background was once a paper, hand blocked, hat box (ca. 1830). No longer usable in original form, Miss Woods pressed it flat and framed it in old pine.

The house Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Faure built in Tacoma, Washington, two years ago, is a modern ranch type, designed to take full advantage of mountain and water views on either side. The rose brick fireplace wall serves as divider between living and kitchen areas. The mantel itself is a solid mahogany slab, and the fireplace opens on a raised tile hearth.

In furnishing her new house, Mrs. Faure has used her antique pieces, both in furniture and bric-a-brac, and nowhere does this happy union of old and new show more delightfully than in her summer mantel arrangement, pictured. Centered is a Sheffield tureen, ca. 1850, simple in line and exquisitely chased, filled, on this occasion, with vari-colored nasturtiums. None of the flanking Majolica fish, collected over a period of years (and representing a terrific price increase since purchase), are quite alike. Variation in size, coloring, base, and lining make each a personality. None are marked. Only one, the largest, on the end at the left, is of late manufacture. Purchased in Canada, it shows, on even the most superficial comparison, such careless detail in both coloring and molding as to admit no possibility of being mistaken for old.

As is often the case, the first piece in Mrs. Faure's collection was "from the family", a gift some seventy-five years ago to her grandmother by a 7-year old son who had laboriously saved 25¢ for its purchase.

These quaint open-mouthed piscatorial figures—no one has ever quite decided what kind of fish they are—are particularly enchanting as carol singers among Christmas greens. When they become too raucous, or Mrs. Faure tires of such "action" ornaments, they are easily removed to a special nook in the basement playroom with the rest of her fish collection, and more formal arrangements take their place.

Ridgeway's Beauties of America series, made at Hanley, 1814-1830, for the American trade, contained several Boston views. Among these were the Boston Anthenaeum, Court House, Hospital, Insane Hospital, Octagon Church, St. Paul's Church, State House, and the Boston Almshouse, pictured. While the tureen shows the Almshouse, the tureen cover shows Cambridge College, Cambridge, Mass. The soup tureen platter, above, also in this series, pictures the Deaf and Dumb Asylum in Hartford, Conn. Pieces shown are part of a large collection, for sale individually. From Hermitage Antiques, Silver Spring, Md.

Sheffield plate differs from other plated ware in that the plating is done on the sheet metal, usually copper, before the article to be made is formed. Thomas Boulsover, of Sheffield, discovered the process in 1742, and soon after, Joseph Hancock set up a factory in Sheffield to manufacture small items. Though many factories came to use this process, in London, Birmingham and France, it was always termed "Sheffield". It remained popular till about 1840 when electroplating took its place. Though between 1784 and 1836 some 125 makers in Birmingham and Sheffield registered their marks, they did not always use them on their pieces, and the majority of Sheffield pieces are unmarked. Sheffield turkey or roast service shown is 27" long over-all, 19½" wide over-all, 16½" high. Platter has well and tree, and hot water container. ($150.) From Seek and Find Shop, Mifflinburg, Pa.

Wedgwood pitcher, ca. 1800, after the style of Pratt ware, has an all over relief design featuring bust of Admiral Duncan, who as commander-in-chief of the North Sea Fleet (1795-1801) defeated Dutch Admiral De Winter off Camperdown in 1797, capturing 11 ships. Reverse of pitcher shows two women carrying flowers. Decoration is crude in highly colorful tones of blue, orange, brown, black and green. 5½" high, 5" wide over-all, "Wedgwood" is incised under glaze. This piece is for sale, and owner interested in purchasing similar type items. From Chas. B. Smith, Philadelphia, Pa.

Curule-shaped Chairs, usually of camp stool type with curved legs, derived from the ancient Roman sella curilis, the seat appropriated to only the highest dignitaries. Introduced in England by Italian workmen during the reign of Henry VIII, they had earlier been in use on the Continent. Shown is an Italian Savonorola chair, accorded by experts to the 16th century. Probably Italian walnut. Back lifts off, sides and bottom fold. Lion head decoration, claw feet. From Mrs. E. M. Ayers, Osceola, Arkansas.

Christmas Post Cards

quently found expressing the Christmas post card message. In Denmark sheaths of grain are fastened to poles, rooftops, and barn tops for the birds holiday dinner and in Norway an ancient custom is to feed salt to the cattle on Christmas day.

In old England, a holly spray was placed on a beehive because it was believed the bees hummed a carol in honor of the Christ Child. On a post card published by the APM Co., depicting a brown-eyed angel, there is a bee so cleverly worked in the design that it might be unnoticed by any but the most observing collector.

Stars are found on most all post card greetings with a truly religious theme, for they figure prominently in the symbolic language of the Bible. Myriads of other legends lent themselves to Christmas post card greetings and the wise collector can increase his collecting pleasure two-fold if he is alert to the various ones that come within his provenance. An appreciation and understanding of the symbols, traditions, and legends handed down from generation to generation represents just one other form of learning through collecting.

Although commercial Christmas cards had been on the market in England since the early 1840s, the idea of purchasing stock greetings to be mailed at Christmas had not caught on very well on this side of the Atlantic. In 1875, Louis Prang, the lithographer, who had been producing multicolor Christmas cards for export, placed some of these cards in stationery shops in Boston and New York — reputedly the first American made Christmas greetings to go on the market. From then on through the 1880s, thousands were produced, but in the middle 1890s, German importations practically took over the market. Not till 1906 did the American greeting card industry start its revival.

such as a Burmese cup and saucer, a copy of the famous Morgan vase in Peachblow, an 8" lily-type Amberina vase, are included in the collection thus begun at the Dallas Museum. Such projects, regionally promoted, depict the broadest, most altruistic aspect of collecting—and these efforts to promote appreciation and preservation of Early American Glass in our day, will become even more appreciated in the years to come.

OLD FASHIONED HOLIDAY GOODIES: Springerle boards are so attractive as wall pieces in an Early American room that we'd almost forgotten their original use. That is, until Mrs. Maryon Holte of Tacoma, Washington, reminded us and gave us her grandmother's recipe for springerle, brought over from Norway years ago. We pass it on to you here—and wish you Christmas luck. We haven't tried it ourselves yet — but it's not too early to make up some of these goodies and store for Christmas parties. According to Mrs. Holte, to whom springerle is a traditional part of Christmas, the cookies are very decorative — also extremely hard like other Scandinavian confections. They're warranted to keep indefinitely, and have been known, when found as late as Easter squirrelled away in a bureau drawer, to taste to a 7-year old "just as good as new!" Here's how:

4 eggs
2 cups powdered sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon anis flavor
4 cups flour

Separate the eggs, beat yolk and sugar ¼ hour (low speed — you see, she's brought her recipe up to date!), add flour, baking powder and stiffly beaten egg whites. Roll out ¼" thick, (dough is not sticky) and press the lightly floured springerle board into the dough. If springerle rolling pin is used, roll out with ordinary rolling pin, then roll the design on carefully. Cut apart as design indicates. Let stand overnight, and in the morning, place on a well greased tin and bake to light yellow color (about 20-25 minutes at 350 or slightly less degrees). Store tightly sealed several weeks before using. If you prefer, sprinkle anis seed on springerle board before using.
